Denmark has been conducting stream and lake restoration since the 1980s and the experience and knowhow is extensive. Currently, the number of restoration projects are higher than ever especially due to obligations under the Water Frame Directive. During this excursion we will visit several stream and lake restorations in the area around Aarhus and hear more about the projects – aims, how it was done and the biological effects. There will be time to look at flora and fauna around the systems. Lunch is served during the trip. Boots might be preferred.
